Semiotics of Roland Barthes and his theory of myth

Roland Barthes helped found the modern science of semiology, applying structuralist (or semiotic) methods to the “myths” that he saw all around him: media, fashion, art, photography, architecture, literature.

According to Barthes, anything in culture can be a sign and send a specific message. In his Mythologies Barthes describes some methods of

Signs, signification, and semiotics (semiology)

Embodying a transformation from structuralism to poststructuralism, Roland Barthes, though initially characterised by a Marxist perspective, extended structural analysis and semiology to broad cultural phenomena, and promulgated and popularised the Poststructuralist notions of “the death of the author”, of the text as a site of freeplay, and the difference between the “work” and the “text” and the “readerly” and “writerly” text.
